ERSKINE, The Hon. THOMAS (post Baron ERSKINE). Adm. Fell.-Com. (age 25) at TRINITY, Jan. 13, 1776. [4th and youngest] s. of Henry David, 10th Earl of Buchan (and Agnes, dau. of Sir James Stewart, Bart., of Goodtrees). B. Jan. 10, 1750, at Edinburgh. Educated at the Grammar School and University of St Andrews. Matric. Michs. 1770; M.A. 1778; Hon. LL.D. 1811. Midshipman in H.M.S. Tarlar, Mar. 1764, and for four years served in the West Indies; Acting Lieut., 1768. After his father's death, 1767, used his small patrimony in buying a commission in the 2nd Batt. of the 1st Regt. of Foot; published anonymously a pamphlet entitled Abuses in the Army. With his Regt. for two years in Minorca. Lieut., Apr. 21, 1773. An interest in law (through a chance visit to an Assize Court) made him decide to go to the Bar. Student at Lincoln's Inn, Apr. 26, 1775; in order to diminish the then five years' period of studentship to three, he resolved to obtain an M.A. degree, and entered Trinity College. Called to the Bar, July 3, 1778 and at once obtained a brief which brought him fame, his client being Thomas Baillie (for whom see D.N.B.), Lord Sandwich, 1st Lord of the Admiralty, 1778; in 1781 obtained a verdict of 'not guilty' for Lord George Gordon. An intimate friend of Sheridan and Fox. Attorney-General to the Prince of Wales, 1783, but lost office by appearing on behalf of Thomas Paine, author of the Rights of Man, 1792. M.P. for Portsmouth, 1783; and 1790-1806. Procured acquittal for most of those prosecuted by the Government for conspiracy or constructive treason, 1783-4. Contributed by his speech on a libel case to the passing of Fox's Libel Act, 1792; successfully defended Stokdale on a charge of libelling the managers of Hastings's impeachment, 1789. Supported the Peace of Amiens in Parliament. Chancellor of the Duchy of Cornwall, 1802. Lord Chancellor, 1806, created Baron Erskine, of Restormel Castle, Cornwall. Presided at Lord Melville's trial, 1806. Resigned Lord Chancellorship, 1807, and retired into private life. Attempted farming on his estate in Sussex, which proved a failure. Lived latterly at his house in Pimlico, and at a cottage, Buchan Hill, Sussex. In later life, in spite of his earlier great professional earnings, fell into pecuniary straits, fearing a revolution, had invested large sums in U.S.A., but lost them. K.T. Opposed the second reading of the Bill of pains and penalties against Queen Caroline, 1820, and protested against the Corn Law Bill, 1822. Worked for the cause of Greek independence, 1822-3. A universal favourite and a proverbial wit. Lord Russell said that he possessed 'the tongue of Cicero and the soul of Hampden,' but his vanity made him ridiculous and he was caricatured as 'Baron L. of Eye,' and known as 'Clackman.' As an advocate and orator he was incomparable. Married (1) Apr. 21, 1770, before coming of age, Frances, dau. of Daniel Moore, M.P. for Marlow; (2) Mary (or Sarah) Buck, Oct. 12, 1818, at Gretta Green. Died Nov. 17, 1823, at Almondell, West Lothian, while on his way to stay with his brother, the Earl of Buchan. Buried in the family burial-place at Uphall, Linlithgow. Author, Armata, a political romance. Father of David M. (1794), Henry D. (1806) and Thomas (1808). (D.N.B.; Burke, P. and B.; G.E.C.; Foss, Judges of England; Scots Peerage, ii. 277.)

May 18, 1752. School, Westminster. On the stage for a short time after leaving school, and became acquainted with Foote the actor. Studied medicine, 1770. Ord. deacon (London) Oct. 27, 1770; priest, Dec. 21, 1776. For some time one of the King's Chaplains at Whitehall. Took up journalism, and became an anonymous correspondent, generally on theatrical topics, of the Public Advertiser. In some of his articles he alleged that a certain nobleman had ruined himself by gambling, whereupon Lord Loughborough brought an action against the editor, obtaining £500 damages, which ended Este's connection with his journal. Later he started another paper, The World, in conjunction with Major Edward Topham, but a dispute arose between them over financial matters. Este was also suspected of having introduced into The World some defamatory articles on Lord Cowper, which became the subject of legal proceedings, ultimately settled out of court, which gave the paper its death-blow. Travelled on the Continent and went twice to the W. Indies. Appears to have made a great impression on his contemporaries by his learning, extensive reading and criticisms, being described by Taylor as "perhaps the most extraordinary character of his time." Author, My Own Life: A Journey in the year 1793, through Flanders, Brabant, etc. Died in 1826. (Record of Old Westminsters, St. John's Coll. Adm., iv, 239; for an obit. biography of him see *G. King William IV, when Duke of Clarence, by Mrs. Jordm, the actress. B. Mar. 1, 1808, in London. School, Wimbledon (Mr. Pearse). Matric. Easter, 1826; LL.B., 1832; Hon. LL.D., 1835. In Holy Orders, but no details recorded as ordination. Chaplain to Queen Adelaide, V. of Marlborough, Oxon., 1829-54. Had a great devotion for celebrated actresses, including Fanny Kemble, who tells how he informed her that he had been trained as a sailor, but that in consequence of the death of his brother, he had been literally taken from on board ship, and in spite of the utmost reluctance on his part, compelled to take Orders; he had asked her to write a sermon for him, which she indignantly declined to do. He made a successful and very generous parish priest. Married, Jan. 2, 1845, Sarah Elizabeth Catherine, dau. of Lord Henry Gordon, and had issue. Died June 14, 1884. (Burke, P. and B. (under Munster); G.E.C.; A. H. Cooke; Al. Obit.; Macready, Diaries, II, 140; Foster, Peerage.)

County Court Judge, for Waterford, Kilkenny and Queen's Counties. K.C. at Dublin. Consul of the German Empire. A Roman Catholic. Lived latterly at 15, Clyde Road, Dublin. Died there Mar. 5, 1920. Brother of John D. (1869). (Burke, P. and B.; Law Lists; Scott, MSS.; Foster, Men at the Bar; Who's Who, 1910-20; The Times, Mar. 8, 1920.)

FITZGERALD, EDWARD. Adm. Fell. Com. (age 18) at TRINITY, July 3, 1755. S. of James, of Stone Hall, Co. Clare, Ireland. School, Wakeneld, Yorks. (Mr. Clarke). Matric. Easter, 1759. (Not found in Burke, L.G. of Ireland); one of these names appointed Commissioner of Stamp Duties in Ireland, 1789; Annual Reg., XXVI, 230.)

FITZGERALD, EDWARD. Adm. pens. (age 17) at TRINITY, Feb. 27, 1826, 13rd s. of John Purcell, B. Mar. 31, 1809, at The White House, Brameld, near Woodbridge, Suffolk. School, King Edward VI, Bury St Edmunds (Dr Milking). Matric. Michs. 1829; B.A., 1830. Lodged at 19, King's Parade, 1826-30 (where there is a memorial plaque). His friends at Cambridge included W. M. Thackeray, John Allen, W. H. Thompson, Frank Edgeworth, Robert Groome, Charles Buller, Frederick Maurice, John M. Kemble, Blakesley, Merivale, Spedding, and Monckton Milnes, though contemporary with the Tennyson brothers, he did not come to know them until 1835. Contributed to The Knob and The Gracian, 1829-30. Published translations of Moliere in Paris, 1827. In his platonic dialogue, Euphonia, described an idyllic excursion on the Cam. Copied into his notebook shortly before his death Roger Ascham's words, 'He that is able to maintain his life and learning at Cambridge knoweth not what a felicity he hath. I do salute you all, I name none, because I would leave out none, and because I love all.' His lyric, The Meads in Spring, appeared in 1831, and Charles Lamb wrote at the time that 'The Athenian has been hoaxed with some exquisite poetry.' In 1842 Thackeray introduced him to Carlyle, who, in search of materials for his Cromwell had visited the battlefield of Naseby in the company of Dr Arnold, and had been misled by an obelisk erected by Fitzgerald's father. 'Gurlyle,' as Fitzgerald called him, exclaimed, 'Why does the obelisk stand there? It might as well stand at Charing Cross, the blockhead that it is!' In 1846 met E. B. Cowell, later Professor of Sanskrit, who introduced him to the writings of Omar Khayyam and other Persian poets. His letters to Cowell in 1857 record the progress of the Rubaiyat translation, which was published in its first version in 1859, but remained unknown for some years. Rossetti and Swinburne discovered it on a stall in St Martin's Lane, priced at a penny. It was said to have subsequently fetched £4000. Tennyson tortuously speaks of Fitzgerald's 'than which I know no version done in English more divinely well'; and added a 'thuse and opulent' epilogue after Fitzgerald's death. Other honours included the Cadron medal for his Spanish translations. He also translated Agamemnon and compiled a Dictionary of Modern Sengue. Married, Nov. 4, 1856, Lucy, dau. of his friend Bernard Barton, a Quaker banker, of Woodbridge. Died in the night of June 13, 14, 1883, at Merion rectory, Northolt, during his annual visit to the rectory, George Clabbe (1820-81). 'He was buried beneath the church tower at Doule, with the words on his tomb that Cowell had taught him to love: "It is He that hath made us, and not we ourselves."' Among obituary remarks may be mentioned that of W. H. Thompson, Master of Trinity, who called him 'a prisoner in Doubting Castle,' and that of Carlyle, who saw him as 'a lonely, shy, kind-hearted man, who discharged the sacred rites of hospitality with a kind of zeal or piety.' I traced his manuscripts to W. Aldis Wright for posthumous publication; some letters, in the Trinity College Library, are still (1942) unpublished. His brother John (1820) resembled him closely in character and appearance, and they were compared with Antipholus of Ephesus and Antipholus of Syracuse. Their father, a descendant of Cromwell, took the name and arms of Fitzgerald in lieu of Purcell, Oct. 3, 1817, while they were living near Paris. Edward was anxious to distinguish himself from Edward Marlborough (1824), who left in ill odour. (A. C. Benson, English Men of Letters series; Aldis Wright, in D.N.B., 607; A Full and Fair Copy, Cambr. Bibliog. Eng. Lit., III, 281-3 and 534; Thomas Whitall, Life, which contains the 'Philosopher' and 'Statesman' photographs; R. H. Groome, Two Scotch Friends, Changes of Name; Lamb, Letters, II, 938-9, 1013.)

- FORSTER, EDWARD MORGAN. Adm. at KING'S, Oct. 4, 1807. [Only] s. of Edward Morgan Llewellyn (1760), architect (and Aiche Clar). B. 1879. School, Fombridge. Matric. Michs. 1807; Exhibitor, 1807; Praeexam. 1810 and 1800; B.A. 1800; M.A. 1811. Fellow, 1827-33. Clark Lecturer, 1827; Rede Lecturer, 1840-1. 'It is apparent,' says Rose Macaulay in The Writings of E. M. Forster, 'that he fell in love with Cambridge. His second novel, The Longest Journey, is partly a glorification of undergraduate life, as being nearer the true and shining world of reality than is the dark, chaotic muddle and falsity of most life outside.' Began the search for 'sly shades' and elusive connections with a series of short stories which reappeared in The Celestial Omnibus and The Eternal Moment. Two novels, Where Angels Fear to Tread and A Room With A View, were the result of explorations in Italy. Howards End, 'that rich work of delicate social irony and imaginative individual creation' followed in 1910. A Passage to India was begun after his first visit there in 1912, and completed ten years later. During the Great War, served with the British Red Cross in Egypt. While stationed at Alexandria, compiled a History and Guide to the locality, a happy instance of 'imagination harnessed to precision.' Essays written soon after the War include The Consolations of History (republished in Amber Harvest) which suggests that 'with existence as it threatens to-day—a drugled mass of elderly people and barbed wire—it is agreeable to glance back to enchanted carnages, and to croon over conditions we now subscribe to exterminate. Tight little faces from Oxford, fish-shaped faces from Cambridge, we cannot help having our dreams. Was life then warm and tremendous?' Other works include a Memor of G. Lowes Dickinson and the Rede Lecture on Virginia Woolf, whose posthumous collection, The Death of the Moth, contains an estimate of Forster's work. Awarded the Prix Femina Vie Heureuse and the James Tait Black Prize, 1925. Benson Medal, Royal Society of Literature, 1937. Member of Lord Chancellor's Committee on Defamatory Labels, 1939. President, National Council for Civil Liberties, 1942. Hon. LL.D. (Aberdeen) 1931. Living at West Hackhurst, Amber Hammer, Surrey, in 1942. (Trinity Sch. Reg.; King's Coll. Adm. Reg.; Who's Who, 1942; E. M. Forster.)

As early as 1800, describes himself as a "supersannuated barrister." His father was the reputed author of the letters of Junius (see Leslie Stephen's article in D.N.B.). Educated with a son of Clive, by Ribouville, a French emigrant, to whom Sir Philip sends from India a detailed recipe for making his son into an English gentleman. "I would not have him begin to learn to write before he is seven, nor to dance before he is nine years old. . . My present ideas are upon the whole to give him that sort of education which may qualify him to sit with credit in the House of Commons, if ever my fortune should enable me to place him there." Evidently held some situation in the household of the Prince of Wales (afterwards George IV), as he wrote home on Aug. 14, 1802, that "the Prince's uniform having attracted the notice of the General (Bonaparte) at the Tuileries, he did me the honour this time of addressing me. He renewed his acquaintance with my father, and was very civil to him." In 1806 at the Pavilion, Brighton, when smug, "suddenly he found the full face of the Prince, somewhat heated by the eagerness of his performance, in immediate contact with his own; and this circumstance, combined with the loud bass tones in which H.R.H. was singing, caused him to burst out laughing. The Prince only added the offender to order with the words, "Come, come, Philip!" Married, 1805, Eliza Jane, dau. of Godshall Johnson, of Putney. Lived latterly at Ranelagh House, Fitham. Died Oct. 2, 1837. Father of Henry R. (1820) and John G. (1828). (Harrow Sch. Reg.; Francis and Keary, The Francis Letters; Parkes and Merivale, Memoirs of Sir Philip Francis, *St John's Coll. His first publication was a revised edition of Long's Salthus, 1884. The preparation of articles on taboo and totemism for the Encyclopaedia Britannica, at the request of his colleague Robertson Smith, formed 'the beginning of a systematic application to anthropology.' His reputation in this field was enhanced by his book Totemism, 1887, and established permanently by his famous Golden Bough—'the G.B.', as he called it—(1st ed., 2 vols., 1890; 2nd ed., 1900; 3rd ed., 12 vols., 1911-15; supplement, 1936; abridged, 1922; trans. into French, German, Swedish and Italian). Collected and digested an enormous number of books and pamphlets on all phases of savage life, and so largely prepared the way for the more vigorously scientific investigation of all primitive cultures. Made several visits to Greece while completing his edition of Pausanias's Description (dedicated to his Glasgow professor, G. G. Ramsay). The preface to this work pays a great tribute to his colleague; in his rooms there the Cambridge Review was founded, 1879. Professor of Social Anthropology, Liverpool University, 1907-8. Gifford Lecturer at St Andrews, 1911-12. Huxley Memorial Lecturer, 1919. In 1922 the Frazer Lectureship on Social Anthropology was founded in his honour to be held in rotation at the Universities of Cambridge, Oxford, Glasgow and Liverpool. In 1923 the University of Nancy presented a medal to him and his wife (a French lady, formerly Mrs Lily Grove, who for many years assisted him in his work). When the centenary of the birth of Renan was celebrated, 1923, Frazer gave an allocution at the Sorbonne in the presence of the French President, William Wyse Lecturer at Trinity, 1932-3. The Gorgon's Head, 1927, introduced by his friend Anatole France, culminates with A Dream of Cambridge. 'We paced the cloisters in discourse, as of old, on friends and books, on Nature's loveliness, on the glories of the antique world, on the vision, the beatific vision, of a Golden Age to come.' It concludes with a passage in Ciceronian Latin which Frazer preferred to all his other writings. The Bibliography compiled by Theodore Besterman in honour of Frazer's 80th birthday reproduces the chalk drawing by Lucien Monod, 1907, which was presented to the Fitzwilliam Museum by Lady Frazer. Lived principally at 1, Brick Court, Temple, London, E.C., at Cambridge and in Paris. Latterly continued his studies despite complete blindness. Died May 7, 1941, at Causewayside, Cambridge, a few hours before his wife. They both bequeathed their property to Trinity. His notebooks appeared in 1938-9 under the general title Anthologia Anthropologica. Edited and translated Apollodorus' The Library, 1921, and Ovid's Fasts, 1929; edited the Letters of Cowper, his favourite poet, 1912, and the essays of Addison, 1915, which he imitated in his own Sir Roger de Coverley, 1920. Other works include: Questions on the Customs of Sarages, 1907; Psyche's Task, 1909; The Worship of Nature, 1920; Man, God and Immortality, 1927. For a biography see R. A. Downie's J. G. Frazer, Glasgow Univ. Roll, Middle Temple Bench Br.; Foster, Men at the Bar; Who's Who; Encyclopaedia Britannica, which mistakenly gives 'called to the bar, 1876'; The Times, May 8, 1941; Cambridge Review, May 16 and 23, 1941.

FRERE, JOHN HOOKHAM. Adm. pens. at CARUS, 1787. S. and h. of John (1758) [and Jane, only child of John Hookham, merchant, of Beddington, Surrey], of Roydon, Norfolk. B. May 21, 1769, in London. Schools, Putney (Mr Cornick) and Eton (where he formed a life-long friendship with Canning). Matric. Michs. 1787; Scholar, 1787-91; Members' Prize, 1792; B.A. 1792; M.A. 1795. Fellow, 1791-1810. Contributed to The Microscopist, 1780-7. Entered the Foreign Office, M.P. for W. Looe, Cornwall, 1790-1802. Joined with Canning in the publication of The Anti-Jacobin, 1797-8. Succeeded Canning as Under Secretary of State at the Foreign Office, 1799. Envoy to Lisbon, 1800-2; to Madrid, 1802-4. Recalled, in Pitt's words, 'in consequence of circumstances having occurred that made it impossible for him any longer to communicate with the Prince of Peace'. P.C., 1805. Envoy to Berlin, 1807, but mission abandoned owing to Treaty of Tilsit. Minister Plenipotentiary to Central Junta in Spain, 1808-9; recalled after being blamed for Moore's retreat to Corunna, but created 'Marquez de la Union' by the Junta. Retired from diplomacy, and declined the post of Ambassador to St Petersburg, and twice refused a peerage. Succeeded, 1807, to Roydon Hall. 'The ideal of a cultivated country gentleman.' Settled at Malta for the benefit of his wife's health, 1820, where he was visited by numerous travellers, including Sir Walter Scott, who found him 'a good Tory as ever... the most entertaining man I know.' An original projector of The Quarterly Review, and contributed one of its earliest signed articles. While still at Eton, composed a version of the Ode on Adeline's Victory, of which Scott said that 'if it had been produced as ancient it could not have been detected on internal evidence.' Three of his translations from the Poem of the Cid were appended to Southey's Chronicle, although he had pillaged Southey as the Needy Knife-Grinder in the Anti-Jacobin. Helped Southey with his History of the Peninsula War. Formed one of Byron's 'cursed puritanical committee' which denied against publication of Don Juan, 1819; Frere's Monks and Giants, an Arthurian burlesque published under the pseudonym of Whistlercraft, provided the stanza and style for Beppo. Assisted Coleridge (financially), enabled him to send his younger son to Cambridge, and hired a reporter to take down his lectures on philosophy. 'Of all the men I have yet met with,' said Coleridge, 'in public or literary life, you possess beyond comparison the purest and manliest taste.' Gabriel Rossetti, another protege, dedicated to Frere his poem Italy e' l'Europa, and W. S. Rose wrote him an Apostle. John Murray ranked him with Scott and Byron, saying 'the might have done anything he chose.' Colverley acknowledged 'the rhythmic art in which Hookham Frere displayed.' Translated Aristophanes' Frogs, Acharnians, Knights and Birds; edited the Fragments of Theognis 'to show the Germans that an Englishman can do something, though not exactly in their own way.' See Frischer's elaborate study, J. H. Frere, sein Leben und seine Werke, sein Einfluss auf Lord Byron, 1905. Married, Dec. 12, 1810, Elizabeth Jennina, Dowager countess of Ertoll, dau. of Joseph Blake, of Ardfry, Co. Galway. Died s.p. Jan. 7, 1840, at the Pietà Valetta, Malta.

- FURNESS, HORACE HOWARD. Hon. Litt.D. 1899. 2nd S. of William Henry, D.D. (whom Emerson called a "popular and excellent minister"). B. Nov. 2, 1833, in Philadelphia, U.S.A. B.A. (Harvard) 1854; M.A. 1858, Hon. M.A. 1877; LL.D. 1894. Hon. Ph.D. (Halle-Wittenberg) 1878, etc. Fellow of American Academy, Adm. to the Bar at Philadelphia, Nov. 1850. Made for himself, early in the sixties, "a mighty variorum Hamlet, cutting out the notes of five or six editions and pasting them on a page with a little rivulet of text." Encouraged by the Shakespeare Society of Philadelphia, and by his wife who published a Concordance, Furness prepared his 'stately terracotta and gold volumes, prized by students of Shakespeare the world over.' Romeo and Juliet appeared in 1871 and fourteen other plays were issued at regular intervals during his lifetime. "The most genial, scholarly and witty editor that ever shed light on the works of Shakespeare," runs a contemporary pangyric. His correspondence with W. Aldis Wright, joint editor of the Cambridge Shakespeare, began with a wrangle in the Athenaeum in 1870. Latterly Furness's son, of the same name, became co-editor of the Variorum Shakespeare, and continued it after his father's death, but with greater industry than precision. Furness himself edited his father's correspondence with Emerson, whose lifelong friend he had been. Married, June, 1860, Helen Kate, dau. of Evans Rogers, hardware merchant. Died Aug. 13, 1912, in his library at Lindenshade, Wallingford, Philadelphia. (Dictionary of American Biography; Harvard Univ. Catalogue; *Jayne, Letters of H. H.
